

You Can Help Transform Neglected Historical Cemeteries & Preserve Green-Space

In one of America's largest city scapes, tucked between super highways and densely populated residential streets are over 40 historical cemeteries that have escaped development. Although sometimes poorly used for illegal dumping, they remain potential pockets of green space and nature. Some have Irises planted by pioneers and ancient oak trees. While due respect is given to the graves, cemeteries offer opportunities for residents to rally together for neighborhood improvement as well as to enjoy nature and absorb local history.

Your help is needed to preserve these precious spaces of history and environment. Likely there is one in a neighborhood near you and with your help all will enjoy the benefits of cleaner air, song birds and butterflies. Join together with neighbors and transform one of these historical ecological oases into a beautiful valued green space.
